For most of church

our generation knows
little about this rich,

Today's marketplace

Leading companies

Practice, Etienne Wenger, Richard McDermott, and William M. Snyder argue that while communities form naturally, organizations need to become more proactive and systematic about developing and integrating them into their strategy. This

Online Library

Living Into

book provides practical models and methods for stewarding these communities to reach their full potential- without squelching the inner drive that makes them so valuable. Through in-depth cases from firms such as DaimlerChrysler, McKinsey &

Company, Shell, and the World Bank, the authors demonstrate how communities of practice can be leveraged to drive overall company strategy, generate new business opportunities, tie personal development to corporate goals, transfer best practices, and recruit and retain top talent.

They define the unique features of these communities and outline principles for nurturing their essential elements.

They provide guidelines to support communities of practice through their major stages of development, address the potential downsides of communities, and discuss the specific challenges of distributed communities. And they show how to recognize the value created by communities of practice and how to build a corporate knowledge strategy around them.

On the necessity of friendships for Christian discipleship.

Friendship isn't always given a lot of thought—and lately,
it doesn't get a lot
of time and effort,
either. But in a world of busy and isolated lives, in which friendships can too easily become shallow, tenuous, and homogeneous, Dana Robert insists that good friendships are a vital and transformative part of the Christian life—a mustard seed of the kingdom of God. She believes Christians have the responsibility—and countercultural by making friends across

cultural, racial,
socioeconomic, and
religious lines that separate people from each other. In this
